

Eligibility

Eligibility in medicines development usually refers to the requirements that participants must meet in order for them to have the possibility of being selected to participate in a clinical trial. The requirements (criteria) will typically contain not only elements which allow participation (inclusion criteria) but also details of what will prevent someone from participating (exclusion criteria).