

Health event

A health event can be positive or negative. An example of a health event is the development of a disease, an injury, or responding to a medicine.