

Minimal Anticipated Biological Effect Level [MABEL]

The Minimal Anticipated Biological Effect Level (MABEL) is the anticipated dose needed to result in a biological effect in participants of a clinical trial. It is a safety window based on pharmacological threshold. The minimal anticipated biological effect level is recommended as a useful approach to calculate the Safe Starting Dose, as it is the lowest dose that is active.