

National Competent Authority [NCA]

A National Competent Authority – or regulatory authority – has the power to grant marketing authorisations for medicinal products in its territory.

National competent authorities are organisations that have the legally delegated or invested authority, or power to perform a designated function, normally monitoring compliance with the national statutes and regulations.