Respect for persons

Respect for persons is the concept that all people have the right to exercise their full autonomy. In research, this principle seeks to ensure that a participant's wishes are respected, even if they differ from those of the researcher.