

Study Population

The study population is the group of individuals in a study. In a clinical trial, the inclusion and exclusion criteria describe who will and will not be included, thus defining the characteristics of the study population.